Spring 2018

BRUCKMANN

FREDERKING & THALER

CHRISTIAN

GeraMond

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

we are happy to announce a spring program 2018 that has a lot to offer to our partners and readers:

Bruckmann Verlag concentrates on travel and mountaineering of course. Not only does it cover a whole range of means of transport but also an impressive number of travel destinations.

Frederking & Thaler doesn't stop at the ends of the world but goes beyond them to present cloud hunters and traces of the stars to their readers.

National Geographic Germany provides us with inspiring pictures of a roadtrip from Munich to Mumbai, the latest editions of the successful "style guide"-series plus the first volumes of our brand new Walking Guides.

Christian Verlag finally manages to pacify the kitchen by officially dividing cooking chores between him and her. But also last minute cooking, regional cuisines and health & lifestyle issues have their place this spring.

GeraMond not only sends train aficionados around the world but also makes you smile at „The 99 biggest lemons in automotive history“.

For our Backlist catalogue please visit our website:
http://www.verlagshaus.de/foreign_rights_76_76.html

My colleague Britta Bettendorf and I together are the new Foreign Rights team at GeraNova Bruckmann publishing house. We are very much looking forward to talking to you about our new books. If you would like to take a closer look at them, please let us know.

Kind regards,

Stefanie Eckl

A Dream Trail Over the Alps

Tears of joy and blister band-aids, joy and disappointment all rub shoulders on the most popular trans-Alpine crossing, the E5 from Oberstdorf to Merano. Nina Ruhland and Christoph Jorda portray the people they meet on their Alpine journey, capturing landlords of mountain huts, bus drivers, and Alpine locals with searing honesty. They accompany hikers on their tour over the Alps, which often becomes a pathway to the inmost depths of oneself.

After trekking the E5, Nina Ruhland (née Hölmer), journalist and mountain hiking guide, decided to change her life. As an Alpine guide she now leads climbing school groups along the route several times a year. In emotionally charged texts and interviews, she explores the mystique of the E5.

Christoph Jorda is a photographer who feels most at home in the mountains and in the crisis-torn areas of the world. He entered the world of E5 for the first time for this book, and captured his visit in stunning images.

- The truth about the E5, from an insider's point of view
- With spectacular shots, drone photography and portraits
- All sections include maps and summarized information on the route and the huts along it

So Mallorca is all about beach holidays? Well, that's certainly one option. But there's more – and this guide focuses on hiking and walking. Mallorca is a hiker's paradise, from the UNESCO-protected Serra de Tramuntana mountains to Llevant, with its rolling hills and wide beaches, or sections of the popular GR221 long-distance trail. As well as 40 varied hikes, the guide also contains tips for cultural sights, cafés with style, and beach life.

Wolfgang Heitzmann, born 1958, is a former tourism consultant and now works in publishing. In addition to writing for a range of media, he has written over 50 books, many about his second hiking home of Mallorca.

- 40 and over: varied tours and excursion tips for hikers
- With fold-out map giving a practical overview and GPS tracks to download
- Hikes for pleasure-seekers and adventurers between Palma and Porto Cristo
- Tips on cultural excursions, beaches and bays
- Plus: 2 exploration tours

Key Knowledge for Mobile Home Lovers

When were mobile homes first built? How big is the biggest mobile home in the world? And why are refrigerators in mobile homes always so small? Mobile homes have come a long way from drivers' initial ambition to spend a more comfortable night in their car to today's app-controlled high-tech mobile homes. Torsten Berning reveals everything you need to know about the journey. Facts and fun from the life of a mobile home are collected in this reader for RV fans.

Torsten Berning has been an author of travel memories and RV guides since 2012. As a specialist in marketing and organization, he also collaborates with various RV manufacturers. Even after more than 250,000 kilometres, they are still infected by the virus and have now travelled to every corner of Europe. In his free time, the whisky connoisseur enjoys walking or cycling with his wife and his dog.

- Lots of facts about RV travel
- Lots of tips to make RV travel easier
- Lots of fun facts to enrich RV travel

Freedom Under the Clouds

When dangerous storms blow up out of harmless clouds, it's a phenomenon we experience again and again. The sky turns black, torrential rain and wind scour the country, and hail pelts down, a destructive force. What makes hearts sink at insurance companies is the perfect setting for "storm hunter" Bastian Werner. Weather extremes and meteorology are his passion. His illustrated book presents spectacular photographs, from the twilight hour and storm cells to glowing nocturnal cloudscares.

Storm hunter Bastian Werner, born in Southern Hesse in 1993, photographs storms and weather phenomena throughout Germany and beyond. During his training as a glider pilot, he began to delve more deeply into the subject of the weather, finding that the better his weather forecasting skills, the longer he was able to keep his glider afloat on thermals and updraughts. He is fascinated by the diversity of weather phenomena in our atmosphere, from storms to sunsets, and has gained a reputation as one of the best-known weather photographers in Germany.

- Stunning photographs of weather and cloud formations from the Alps to the northern coast
- Informative diagrams complement these unique images by "storm hunter" Bastian Werner
- With meteorological texts by experts from the ARD and German Meteorological Service

The Extremes of Life

In the beginning was the Big Bang – or was it?

Among the theories striving to explain how life on earth began, one suggests that comets brought life to us from space; another believes the depths of the oceans were the cradle of all life. Exploration of these unknown worlds is a focus of research in our times. This book presents the latest findings on evolution, aliens, and other worlds in an entertaining and often amusing way.

- The first book to link intriguing facts and riddles from the cosmos and the deep oceans
- An entertaining brief history of evolution based on the latest findings
- Breathtaking images from space and the oceans, some little-known

50,000 km, 540 days, 20 countries

A converted police truck, 50,000 kilometres and 18 months add up to an adventure of a rather special kind. Gabriele Gerner and her husband had a narrow escape from the major earthquake in Bhaktapur, crossed the Manali-Leh Highway – the most dangerous pass in the world, battled brazen policemen and suicidal drivers, and joined the flower children’s celebrations in Rishikesh, yoga capital of the world. This road trip from Munich to Phnom Penh and Mumbai was fringed with milestones; ultimate experiences, extreme nature and emotions of infinite joy.

Gabriele Gerner-Haudum is a former designer and has been a freelance photographer and author of gift books, calendars and travel literature since 1998. She is generally inspired to create her pictures and stories by her exciting adventures and expeditions, which have taken her around the world several times. When not travelling, she lives in Munich and on Mallorca.

- A road trip for the bold – from Munich to Iran, Russia, Mongolia and Cambodia and back to India
- Photographic travel diary with personal notes, amazing stories and souvenirs

Cooking Together Means Never Cooking Alone

Many cooks spoil the broth? Not with this cookbook for couples! The book is actually two books in one, with specific roles assigned to each partner. Of course the recipe prep instructions are designed for kitchens equipped with only one stove, one oven, one food processor, and so on – but both partners have their own duties in the recipe they create together. From simple everyday dishes to culinary masterpieces for experienced cooks.

Annette Sandner grew up in a restaurant environment. Now a freelance consultant, recipe developer, copywriter, and photographer, she is based in Munich. Her blog “culinary pixel” (launched in 2012) has won multiple awards.

Michael “Mikey” Riedl is a trained chef and head of the catering operation HillBilly Food Crew. After working as a chef in Bavaria and Switzerland, he now serves up fine Southern food for events, catering, cookery shows, and trade exhibitions, and holds cookery courses. His style blends a sophisticated take on American food with the tasty, down-to-earth heartiness of the Bavarian Forest, the home of HillBilly Food Crew.

As a couple, Annette Sandner and Michael Riedl are thoroughly familiar with cooking together from their own extensive experience.

- Two in one: the first cookbook set tailored to cooking together
- Clear allocation of tasks to simplify cooking with a partner
- The ideal gift for couples to celebrate a new home, engagement, or wedding

Plancha Meets BBQ

101 Creative Flat Top Grill Dishes

Rudolf Jaeger, Jo Kirchherr

Do you get annoyed when your barbecued food falls through the grill rack? Or if meat and vegetables cook unevenly? Or if fat drips into the flames, causing flare-ups? The plancha could be just what you've been looking for! Everything is cooked on a smooth, flat grill – gambas, shrimp and vegetables retain all their flavor without losing nutrients. And plancha cookery makes liberal use of juices, marinades or alcohol. Barbecue like the Spanish do!

- The very first barbecue book about plancha grills
- A healthier, more creative and more flavourful alternative to conventional barbecuing

Jewish Cuisine – Worldwide

Jewish cuisine is as diverse and varied as Jewish culture and Judaism itself, incorporating influences from many different countries.

Our authors sought out the chefs that are shaping modern Jewish cuisine, and brought their stories and their favorite recipes together in a single volume. Browse over 80 kosher recipes from Israel and the United States, from Germany and Latin America, from South Africa and Australia.

Berlin-born Liv Fleischhacker began to write about food and drink culture in 2014. Growing up bilingual between Berlin and Los Angeles, she writes in German and English. In 2017 she organized Berlin's first Jewish Food Week, "Nosh Berlin". Maria Grossmann (styling) and Monika Schuerle (photos) have worked together on original joint projects since 2007, focusing on food photography from the outset. Their work includes journalism and books, with publications in Germany and abroad. The two work together in Hamburg and Berlin under the name of Team Grossmann.Schuerle.

- 80 recipes from all over the world: creative, modern, unique
- Great portraits of people shaping Jewish cuisine throughout the world

How Your Gut Influences Your Brain

We all know about the brain in our heads. But what about the brain in our bellies? This “second brain” is a mirror of our cerebral brain and plays an important role in emotions of joy and sorrow, influencing our thinking and our psyche. Correct nutrition can thus influence our brain and our mood. This cookery book provides practical rules based on scientific findings, accompanied by the appropriate recipes – so that you can “eat yourself smart”!

Prof. Dr Peter Holzer is Professor of Experimental Neurogastroenterology at Graz Medical University. After gaining his doctorate in biology and biochemistry, he began to explore unanswered questions concerning the functioning of the nervous system and digestive tract. He has spent over two decades examining the issue of how the gut and brain communicate and how this interaction can contribute to stomach pain and psychological disorders. Peter Holzer has received numerous awards and accolades for his work in this area, including the Decoration for Services to the Republic of Austria and the Masters Award for Basic Research in Digestive Sciences of the American Gastroenterological Association.

- Scientifically based: by an expert in intestinal/brain research
- Clearly explained: how our gut influences our brain
- Applied in practice: recipes for a healthy gut and fit brain

Pure Care from Natural Ingredients

With lists of ingredients including allergens, petroleum, and microplastics, many industrially produced cosmetics sound like something to run a mile from, rather than be applied to the skin – especially by pregnant women or babies.

But by making cosmetics yourself using 100 per cent natural substances, you can simply eliminate ingredients of concern.

Herbalist Natascha von Ganski reveals easy ways to make natural cosmetics at home. Natascha von Ganski has been an alternative practitioner since 1998, with her own practice, and lectures in conventional and herbal medicine. She has operated her own herbalism institute in Berlin since 2008, and has been a medical consultant for the development of naturopathic medical products since 2016. She lives with her husband and two children in Berlin.

Gardening For the Soul

In our hectic modern world, many people feel an overwhelming urge to slow down their lives and take time for themselves: time for more mindfulness. The perfect location is outdoors, in our own garden. Gardening and landscaping expert Lars Weigelt is our guide to achieving mindfulness in gardening. He presents practical garden projects that encourage conscious awareness of experiences, helps to find inner peace with seasonal thoughts, and shows how to build strength from the moment. A gardening book that brings tranquility into our chaotic world.

After studying landscape management in Dresden, where he was born and grew up, Lars Weigelt worked in Karlsruhe as a landscape planner among other positions. Since the start of 2011, he has brought together his green-fingered expertise in the fields of text and photographic production and garden planning under the name “Die grüne Note.” As a journalist and editor, he writes for garden-related media; in his capacity as planner, he designs and creates individual gardens and open spaces. He focuses on connecting sound ecological sense with contemporary design and the ‘bigger picture’ of overall project concepts, living his passion for gardening in his activities. Lars Weigelt communicates and shares his gardening knowledge with verve and dedication in magazine articles and gardening books.

- Conscious experience: relaxing, absorbing small-scale garden projects
- Finding peace: with thoughts on the seasons and the changes in nature
- Gaining strength: in observing nature and experiencing life in the here and now
